The Architectural League Prize for Young Architects + Designers 2024: Dirty Online Exhibition

Organized around a yearly theme, The Architectural League Prize for Young Architects + Designers is a juried portfolio competition for early-career practitioners based in North America. Open to architects and designers ten years or less out of a bachelor's or master's degree program, the competition recognizes six talented practices each spring. The winners present their work to the public through a lecture series, exhibition, and collection of interviews and profiles on the League's website.

The 2024 competition theme, "Dirty," asked entrants to "look beyond their presentations of professionalism, respectability, and expertise."

Dirt is matter: it is the soil, the ground, and the earth. But when dirt makes things dirty, they become unclean. To be dirty is not only a physical state of being; it is a moral position, as "dirty" subjects are understood to be vulgar, illicit, unpleasant, and improper. If cleanliness is next to godliness, dirtiness is debased. [...] We prompt designers to expose the forces that shape design practice, projects, modes of representation, and communication. It's time to dish the dirt... How do you reject sanitized ways of working with built, natural, and political environments? Show us your dirty ways and dirty things.

The online exhibition launching June 11 on archleague.org features original work by the League Prize winners, who have created installations either onsite in their respective locations or in entirely digital formats.
